The Trisss believes and acts otherwise. We aim to print the whole body of the daily Associated Press ondget as we receive it, no matter what it comains politically—whether Cleveland and Hendricks, Butler and West, St. John, Belva Lockwood or Blaine and Logan literature. All these political standard-hearers come in for their shand the standard bearers come in for their shands at the standard bearers come in for their shands at the standard bearers come in for their shands at the standard bearers come in for their shands at the standard standard bearers come for the standard bearers come in the beares who they may help or hart. In pursuance of this policy we have been called upon by our day as journalist to print a good many very mean things, coming from Democratic sources and admire, and whose success is very dear to us. We have done this, not because we believe half the outgit sing of "our friends the enemy," but because we believe half the outgit sing or motto. Republicans want to know, and are not afraid to read, all that is said on the standard that nes in its way, or that its mortorial sleuth-hounds can "casteh to "caste hours a contemporary happily it in," no matter what may be a non-all that transpires that as new interest him, is given as it occurs is ample columns of the" TEMPS.

Interest him, is given as it occurs is ample columns of the" TEMPS.

A CORRESPONDENT asks the New York
Sun (Dem.) the following question
"Is it not better for the future of our country to elect Cleveland than Blaine, and does not the advocacy of Butler understand the same of the Sun's answer is terse and to the point.
It says: "When Cleveland was nominated we thought at first that as between him and Blaine it was better that he should be elected. But we do not think so now. The revelations which have been made and proved respecting his life and character are such that it would, in our judgment, be folly and disgrace to elect him. We thought him abster man than Blaine; but now it is proved that he is a worse one. As for endangering Cleveland's election, our correspondent may dismiss his anxiety. It is beyond danger. It is not now within the range of probability that Cleveland should be made Fresident."
